

ShutterShots Photography

The website I designed is similar to what I imagine an amateur photographer's website would look like. While making it I kept in mind that the website should be professional looking while having an element of creativity to it.

The website is targeted towards the general public, whoever would be looking to hire a Photographer but doesn't want to pay a ridiculous price for some photographs. While deciding the price range I thought along the lines of what would I charge for my time taking photo's as well as this I got feedback off of friends and family on what they thought of the price range and general website look and feel.

Each page serves its own purpose the Home page introduces the person to who I am, where the studio is and gives them a general introduction to what is on offer. Gallery gives the viewer a few examples of studio work. Rates and Services tells the viewer the basic prices and goes into more detail on the CD package and Wedding packages, it also briefly mentions travel cost charges. The Contact page is dedicated to a form where the user can fill out their details, write a message and submit it for viewing. It also notes the time and date that they loaded the page.
